Proving One's Identity. From the New York Post.] A correspondent of the Evening Post writing from Stuttgart, Germany, under date of April 11th, relates an occurrence which will remind some of our readers of the story told of Joe Jefferson. Jefferson called at a bank for some money one day, but was unknown to the officer. one day, but was unknown to the officer.
On being asked to identify himself in some way, Jefferson thought a moment, and then with that peculiar drawl so familiar to those who have heard him play Rip Van Winkle, replied: "Scaneder." It was a dog's name, but he got his money. Our German friend writes:

"What does not happen in Stuttgart?

It was in the year of our Lord 1873, on the 24th of March, when in the Subian capital a fearful riot broke out. Everybody ran, tried to save himself, flew homewards, and even the over-crowded opera house, in which the Jewess, with Mr. Labatt as "Eleazar," was just then to be performed, when the terrible news became known, was emptied in a few minutes. Already the mob penetrates the halls consecrated to art, and noththe halls consecrated to art, and nothing remains for Mr. Labatt but to fly into the streets in his costume of "Eleazar." Soon the strange apparition is observed. "A Jow, a Jew!" "Catch him;" "stone him," is the cry that follows the fugitive. He is sur-that follows the fugitive. He is surrounded, and the inexorable multitude insists on the death of the "Jew."

"I am no Jew," cried the terrified singer. "I am Labatt, the great tenor; I sing to night in the part of Eleagar."

"Anybody may say that;" "catch him," "Iynch him," "d'la laterne, bawled the great crowd once more, and the repeated assertion of the artist that he was Labatt was of no avail.

And the artist opened his mouth and sang the aria from the fourth act of the "Jewes."

"Jewes."

And stiller and stiller it became in the circle, breathless listened the multitude to the sweet tones; but scarcely had the last note of the song ceased when endless cheering filled the air. "Hurrah for Labatt," "hurrah for the great singer," resounded out of thousands of throats. Then four men took the artist areas their shoulders and amid the

It is needless to mention that only one finger, three ears and a pillowaseful of wool was left of the entire cabinet, and the sovereign is still conducting in the civil courts of France a suit for damages againsst the manufacturers. We should have no esture to fear a similar disaster in the lava beds, but every reason to hope that the employment of such armor would save life and hasten the conclusion of the campaign.

sion of the campaign. An Italian Adventure.

Here are the details of a robbery re-cently brought to light in Italy, which, but for its heartles nature, might be con-sidered amusing. A Cure was met on the public highway near Nice by a Spaniard, who inquired the direction of the Palace Garibaldi, saying that he had given a louis to a boy to conduct him to the place, and that the young scamp had Eight lines of nosparell, selid, constitute a square.

All lotters, whether upon unsiness or other-adventagements and that he had been saved from shipwreck, and that he would saved from shipwreck, and that he would give the Cure a certain sum of money for masses in order to fulfil a vow that he had made, but before doing so he wished to effer up a prayer. Accordingly they entered the Church of St. Augustine, the entered the Church of St. Augustine, the Cure graciously offering him the holy water, and they piously knelt for some minutes, at the end of which the Spaniard, feigning fatigue, begged the Cure to go and fetch the rouleau which had been left at the foot of the tree at the chateau. He added that, although he had every confidence in the reverend gentleman, he hoped he would not think badly of him if he asked for some guaranty for his return. Not being able to see the very palpable trap thus laid for him, the good-natured Cure delivered up all he had, which consisted of is pocket-book containing seventy frances pocket-book containing seventy francs in notes, and a purse with ninety-five francs in gold and silver, and departed paper only, at the foot of a tree, and that he had been very neatly robbed, by the adroit swindler.

A singular Good Friday custom still prevails at Smithfield, England. It is the duty of the rector of the parish of St. Bartholomew the Great to deposit twen-ty-one sixpences on a gravestone, which the same number of poor widows pick up. The custom originated in the will of a lady who left a sum of money to yield the sixpences to be distributed over her grave. A strange part of the tradition is that any one too stiff in the joints to pick
